Why Do Animals Need Salt?

Have you ever asked yourself the question, “why do animals need salt?” It is not just humans that need salt to maintain balanced fluid levels in the body and prevent health problems. Just like humans, animals need salt in their diet too! Salt consumption for animals is a necessity for a properly functioning body. In fact, all mammals need salt in their diet to survive. Salt is present in the sweats, tears, and blood which makes it a vital component. So, it is quite normal for animals to crave salt to meet their need for sodium along with other minerals. Let’s understand why animals need salt in detail.

Why Salt is an Essential Nutrient

Does salt play an important role only as a flavor? Certainly, not. Food salt or table salt is mostly considered as a flavor and seasoning, although it is also necessary for mineral intake. Salt for animals, on the other hand, is essential for wellness and healthy development. Animals need salt for growth as well as a healthy, properly functioning body. It helps animals to become immune to diseases and gain resistance.

What is in Salt that makes it necessary for animals?

Salt is a chemical compound. And why do animals need salt? It is because salt primarily consists of sodium and chloride, but it contains other essential trace minerals as well such as calcium, magnesium, selenium, and phosphorus. All of these minerals are important for the healthy development of animals. Sodium, for instance, balances the pH levels in the blood. Chlorine, on the other hand, balances the acid levels in the body and helps digestion. Moreover, one of the trace minerals, calcium in salt is fundamental for strong bone and teeth development in lactating cows and nursing calves. It also has other important functions such as;

- Milk production,
- Muscle movement,
- Keeping a regular heartbeat,
- Blood clotting,
- Properly functioning nervous system.

What exactly is a Himalayan salt lamp?

If you've been scratching your head over what exactly a Himalayan salt lamp is, here's a quick explainer. This wellness product is created out of pink salt crystals that are native to areas close to the Himalayas, like Pakistan. The pink salt is used in everything from cooking slabs for grilling to what's known as "salt therapy" at spas.

What exactly is a Himalayan salt lamp?

When it comes to the lamps, the pink salt is thought to release negative ions into your space, which would be able to get rid of dust particles that may affect your health, thus purifying your space and helping the air quality of your home. Because of that, many believe that it can do everything from increasing your energy levels to alleviating symptoms of allergies. Some people say these pink salt lamps can even help boost your overall mood and help you sleep more soundly.

Do Himalayan salt lamps actually work?

It's important to note that no major studies have supported the alleged health benefits of Himalayan salt lamps when it comes to air quality, but one study did suggest that negative ions can help decrease depression. But that being said, we still think this popular decoration can make a great addition to your home. The lamp emits a pinkish hue that makes the ambiance warm and relaxing. Different designs can fit your home's aesthetic, including miniature versions, which make ideal night lights. Plus, it doesn't hurt that these lamps are currently trending in the home decor space.

Himalayan Salt Inhaler: Nature's Immunity Booster

"The benefits

What are some of the benefits of using a salt inhaler?

Respiratory support: A salt inhaler helps to clear out bacteria that do not belong in the respiratory tract. Additionally, salt's anti-inflammatory properties keep bronchial tubes clear. Clears congestion: As mentioned, salt helps clear the mucus that contains harmful bacteria out of your body by dehydrating the bacterial cells until they die.

Mood support & stress relief: In addition to antibacterial and anti-inflammatory qualities, salt releases negative ions which are believed to increase levels of serotonin in the body, thereby boosting your mood and easing stress. Better sleep: better moods and better breathing make it easier to sleep at night, and restorative sleep is one of the most important ways to boost your immune system.

How the salt inhaler works

A more recent and portable alternative to salt caves or rooms is a dry ceramic inhaler, which has a salt chamber inside. This adds salt to the air as you breathe in, mimicking the atmosphere and process in speleotherapy and halotherapy. Just as the neti pot does for the sinus tract, a Himalayan Crystal Salt Inhaler creates a salt environment in the bronchial tract, which results in antibacterial, anti-viral, anti-inflammatory properties that help thin and reduce the build-up of excess mucus and thereby reduce congestion and support ease of breathing.

It's important to note that this Inhaler utilizes hand-mined Himalayan salt that contains an ideal ratio of 84 different minerals in ionic form, which means the minerals can be easily absorbed by individual cells in the body where they are most effective.

If you're suffering from respiratory issues or want a non-invasive way to help ease breathing problems, a salt inhaler can be a simple way to help reduce symptoms and limit pathogens that enter the body.
